mental_floss

When Count Basie was touring London in the 1950s, the jazz legend wanted to bring home some gifts for his kids. And he had the perfect thing in mind: warm fur gloves. So, he went hunting from store to store, but no one seemed to have gloves in children's sizes. Finally, one frustrated clerk told him to give up and settle on a pair of mittens instead. To which Basie smiled and said, "But how're they going to count in the wintertime?"

Of course, Basie was right. There's a real joy in giving. And when you find the perfect gift—when you spot the thing that's going to make your friends or family beam with delight, it's hard to settle. At mental_floss, we know the perfect gift doesn't mean expensive or showy; it means thoughtful. And we've tried to make sure this catalog is brimming with perfect gifts. These are the games we want to play with our kids (pg. 15), the hilarious shirts our nerdy nephews and nieces are going to wear with pride. These are the OCD cutting boards (pg. 25) our "measure twice, cut once" fathers will appreciate, and the handmade goods (pg. 18) our friends will love. Then, there's the emergency clown noses (pg. 30). Because whatever else the year will bring, sometimes a gift is just about reminding them that you're always around to make them smile.

Best wishes,
Will and Mangesh
